Changing Lives, Shaping Futures

At THS, we are delighted to report that we come to you!

We have been serving assisted living facilities, skilled nursing homes and adult daycare centers throughout Florida for nearly 25 years. We expertly treat disorders such as Schizophrenia, Bi-Polar Disorder, Substance Abuse Disorders, Depression, Anxiety, Loss of Ability, Sexual Dysfunction and more.

The Treatment Team Model is our main approach to serving the needs of your specific population.

Each team is led by a Psychiatric Provider, Licensed Clinical Psychologist and may include other Psychologists, LCSWs, Neuropsychologists, Post-Doctoral fellows, Pre- Doctoral Interns, and Masters' level interns. Every clinical treatment team will be individualized for the needs of your facility and every region is assigned a Chief Psychologist to oversee these sites in additional to the team lead at each location.

Our teams support optimal evaluation of your residents' needs and provide for a range of services, including individual therapy, group therapy, clinical assessments, mental status exams, and much more! The team model also promotes direct and effective communication with your staff, as well as on site consultation services and staff trainings as needed.

Medication Management

Psychotropic Medications can play a significant role in treating mental disorders and conditions and are often used in combination with other treatment approaches such as individual and group therapy. Medications can affect people in different ways, and it may take several tries to find the medication that is most effective with the fewest side effects. Our team of mental health experts are here to guide you every step of the way and ensure that the right combination of therapy and medication is tailored for the individual needs of each client.

Why Individual Therapy?

Individual psychotherapy involves discussions between the patient and a mental health professional that may focus on current and past problems, experiences, thoughts and feelings. Daily difficulties may occur in relationships, activities of daily living, and in familial relationships that are stressful and taxing to the individual and their loved ones. In sharing one's experience with a trained therapist, patients gradually come to understand more about themselves, their problems and, as a result, develop an improved attitude toward staff and others, as well as new skills.

Group Therapy

Group therapy is another effective form of therapy that is widely used. Individuals facing similar issues meet to discuss their own difficulties and offer support to the other members of the group. Groups also focus on skill building and help to create a positive therapeutic environment in your specific setting. Many types of groups are offered including creative art therapy, living skills, cognitive strengthening, coping skills, smoking cessation and many others. Groups can also be developed for your specific patient populations.

Medication Management

The decision to take medication for mental health is indeed a significant one, and it is essential to approach it with careful consideration. At THS (Transformative Healthcare Solutions), we prioritize a comprehensive and integrated approach to mental health treatment via telehealth, on site services, and in-office appointments. This approach includes, not only medication management, but also expert care that encompasses talk therapy and a holistic lifestyle approach.

Moreover, it's important to note that psychotropic medications are not a cure for mental health conditions, although they are effective for managing and alleviating many symptoms of mental illnesses. Often, the best outcomes are achieved when medication is used in conjunction with psychotherapy or talk therapy. In general, patients benefit from working with professionals experienced in delivering therapies tailored to their specific issues. For example, cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT) has demonstrated its effectiveness in clinical trials and can be as effective as medication in treating certain anxiety problems.

At THS, we emphasize the importance of individualized treatment plans that consider the unique needs and preferences of each patient. This patient-centered approach helps individuals make informed decisions about their mental health care, whether that involves medication, therapy, or a combination of both.

When a medication management protocol is initiated, the THS clinical team begins the process with an initial evaluation, during which they gather a full medical history to assist in creating an outpatient treatment plan. This process involves education, assessment, and goal development. Subsequently, the clinical team formulates a path towards stability and overall well-being. Achieving psychological wellness may involve the management of psychiatric medications to address chemical imbalances. The THS clinical team continues to monitor the patient's progression to ensure the best possible health outcomes. We consider the individual's physical and mental health needs and aim to maximize independent functioning and healthy relationships in various aspects of life, including work, school, home, social settings and other venues.

What is Clinical Psychology?

The field of Clinical Psychology focuses on the intellectual, emotional, biological, psychological, social, and behavioral aspects of human functioning across the life span, in varying cultures, and at all socio- economic levels. The field integrates science, theory, and practice to understand, predict, and alleviate maladjustment, disability, and discomfort as well as to promote human adaptation, adjustment, and personal development.

What is Forensic Psychology?

Forensic Psychology is the application of psychological knowledge and principles to legal matters. Simply, it is the intersection of mental health and the law. Forensic Psychologists use various methods such as forensic interviewing and standardized psychological tests to help courts, judges, and attorneys answer important legal questions.

Psychologists are the only mental health professionals specifically trained in the use of psychological tests. These tests are one scientific tool that Forensic Psychologists use to measure any given characteristic in an objective and standardized way. For example, Psychologists can use tests to quantify an individual's intellectual abilities and/or personality traits. Forensic Psychologists commonly work in criminal, civil and family courts.

What are interventions?

Interventions in Clinical Psychology are directed at preventing, treating, and correcting emotional conflicts, personality disturbances, psychopathology, and the skill deficits underlying human distress or dysfunction. Examples of intervention techniques include psychotherapy, psychoanalysis, behavior therapy, marital and family therapy, group therapy, biofeedback, cognitive retraining and rehabilitation, social learning approaches, and environmental consultation and design. The goal of intervention is to promote satisfaction, adaptation, social order, and health.

What does assessment entail?

Assessment in Clinical Psychology involves determining the nature, causes, and potential effects of personal distress; of personal, social, and work dysfunctions; and the psychological factors associated with physical, behavioral, emotional, nervous, and mental disorders. Examples of assessment procedures are interviews, behavioral assessments, and the administration and interpretation of tests of intellectual abilities, aptitudes, personal characteristics, and other aspects of human experience and behavior relative to disturbance.
